1. Building the Workforce of Tomorrow report – Support Organisations Respond

(adapted from Community Literacy of Ontario's Member's E-Communiqué October 2016)

The Premier's Highly Skilled Workforce Expert Panel has shared its findings in the "Building the Workforce of Tomorrow; A Shared Responsibility" report. The report makes recommendations on how the province can build on its world-class skills, education and training systems to prepare Ontario's current and future workforce for the technology- and knowledge-based jobs of today and tomorrow.

There are six key areas in the recommendations:

1. Building stronger partnerships between educators and employers
2. Increasing access to job market information

3. Expanding opportunities for learning by experience
4. Promoting both traditional and non-traditional career paths
5. Investing in human capital
6. Closing gaps in skills and competencies

Ontario's LBS Support Organizations believed that it was important to craft a response to this report. Our response was sent to The Honourable Deb Matthews, Minister of Advanced Education and Skills Development (MAESD).

In our response, we highlighted the strengths of the LBS program and how LBS has a role to play in meeting some of the needs identified in the report. The group believed that responding to this report will help raise the profile of LBS within MAESD. We have also requested a meeting with Minister Matthews.

2. National Consultation on a Federal Accessibility Legislation

(Source: Accessibility Ontario newsletter: October 17, 2016)

The Federal Government has recently started a nationwide consultation process with Canadians to inform the development of federal accessibility legislation to transform how the Government of Canada addresses accessibility. The Ministry of Sport and Persons with Disabilities is consulting with stakeholders—including Canadians with disabilities, provinces, territories and municipalities. They would like input on aspects such as

- feedback on the overall goal and approach of the legislation
- to whom the legislation could apply
- what accessibility issues and barriers it could address
- how it could be monitored and enforced
- what else the Government of Canada could do to improve accessibility.

The consultation process is now open, until February 28, 2017. You can participate in the in-person consultation engagement process as well as on-line consultation. On-line questionnaires are available in English, French, American Sign Language or Langue des signes québécoise and in preferred format such as digital, handwritten, video or audio submissions. You can also provide your input by telephone, mail, e-mail, fax and TTY.

4. Dessert Anyone? How to get through the difficult tasks...

(reprinted from Paul Hushilt's Expect Everything newsletter; August 30, 2016)

Have you ever been served a dessert that was so big you thought to yourself, "I will not eat this entire thing. I'll be disciplined and just have a taste."

You take a good forkful and enjoy it, knowing that you are indulging yourself just a bit but being good about eating just enough. But then, bit by bit, you carve off slivers of divine buttery sugary fatty goodness. Sure, you stop eating every so often while you do something else until it calls you again - by name - and then you devour more in tiny grudgingly disciplined bits.

Then you ignore it again.

For a while.

At some point you look over and realize there is so little left it's easily eaten guilt-free. And so you finish it.

That happened to me on a train home over the weekend. All of a sudden it seemed silly not to complete what I had started - a ginormous piece of layered butter-icing chocolate cake. At a critical juncture, it would have been wasteful not to polish it off.

And so I ate it all.

This month, how about looking at something on your to-do list as dessert. Find that task that you just keep putting off. You know the one – a little difficult to work through with just a few too many bites. If you chip away at it long enough, you will suddenly find it irresistible to finish. You'll be happy to check it off your list, and, with no calories!
